

News Roundup

TomCo Energy (LSE) (TOM LN) 1p

A Step Closer -

Today the Company has disclosed that it has submitted its Notice of Intention to Commence Large Mining Operations to the Utah Division of Oil, Gas and Mining (“DOGMA”), taking it one step closer to commencing operations; the next approval is the ground water approval, which is expected to be submitted in 1Q’14.

While the approval of the ground water permit will be the next thing directly attributable to the Company that will lift the shares, we think that the news that Red Leaf has cut ground in its operations with Total will be the next significant catalyst.

Nostra Terra Oil & Gas (NTOG LN) 0.29p

From Small Acorns do Mighty Oaks Grow -

While the Company’s production update is small compared to some of its peers, NTOG is making progress towards increasing the size and scale size of the wells that it participates in. The average of 60bpd is generating all important cash flow, which is needed to continue to turn in to further cash flow, just on a larger scale.

Dart Energy (DTE AU) A$0.13

After the Carnage, Progress Returns -

Today’s announcement that Total has farmed in to its PEDL139 and PEDL140 licences, earning up to 40% by covering the next ~$47mm of the intended work programme. This marks the closing of the transition period for the Company start, which has seen it migrate from an internationally diverse unconventional portfolio of assets, to one that is focused on the UK.

We fully expect this news to be a watershed for the Company, one that sees it leave behind the carnage created by the Australian government’s decision to bate all non-conventional drilling and exploration in Australia.
